2. Citations and explanations

Claim 1 of the document in question relates to a dried fruit covered with a film comprising an edible compound selected from various cellulose derivatives, gum arabic, malto dextrin, one or more fats and mixtures thereof. Claims 2 to 11, which are all dependent on claim 1, concern the different combinations of edible compounds used, the percentages of these compounds, the thickness of the covering film, the addition of protein to the film, and the incorporation of an additive.

Claim 12 relates to a method of producing the dried fruit according to the preceding claims, the method consisting of a step in which the filmogenic solution containing the edible compound and a solvent is applied and of a step in which this solution is dried. Apart from the features corresponding to the dried fruit which is the subject of the preceding product claims, claims 13 to 30, which are all dependent on claim 12 or on claims which are themselves dependent on claim 12, refer to the parameters and the equipment used in the drying step, to the possibility of repeating both method steps a variable number of times, and to the fact that the resultant layers are the same or different.

The last claim concerns a dried fruit according to any one of product claims 1 to 11 that can be obtained according to the method of any of claims 12 to 30 and contains an additional covering.

International search report citations:

WO9115548 refers to aqueous covering films of malto dextrin and cellulose polymer, likewise containing a plasticizer. Whilst the present application considers this plasticizer a possible additive, in the citation it is part of the composition used.

US4981707 concerns food coverings essentially consisting of dextrin and a smaller proportion of xanthane or carboxymethyl cellulose or mixtures thereof. This combination of substances is not mentioned in any of the claims of the present application.

US4822625 concerns a method of roasting dried fruit covered with a first covering layer in the dry state, a second layer of dry residue obtained from an aqueous solution of honey and a covering material which may be xanthane, gum arabic, guar gum and dextrans and a third, final, layer based on honey, sugar and salt.

US4543370 - composition of an edible covering film - relates to a powdery composition composed of a polymer, which may consist of cellulose and which forms a film, pigment particles and a plasticizing polymer. The latter is not part of the covering composition as claimed in the present application and, as in the second citation mentioned in the report, one of the ingredients used in this American patent, the pigment or colorant, is only a possible additive in the present application.
